

Seafood Processing Engineer

- Based in Adelaide
- New, High Profile Role
- Attractive Remuneration

An exciting job opportunity now exists for an outstanding food scientist to join SARDI, a leading international research and development institute which undertakes work in four scientific divisions (Aquatic Sciences, Innovative Food and Plants, Livestock Systems and Sustainable Systems).

The Innovative Food and Plants area, working in conjunction with MISA (Marine Innovation South Australia), a joint venture of South Australia's marine research organisations, is seeking someone who has a complete understanding of food processing (seafood/red/white meat or dairy) and who will develop a strategic research and development plan for the South Australian seafood industry, working with a multidisciplinary team to deliver industry growth and development.

The successful candidate will have a proven track record in leading research projects, delivering on time and to agreed quality. A degree in Engineering, Food Science or Science is required.

High-level communication skills are essential as you will be required to develop close relationships with the fishing industry, seafood processors, the marketing sector and relevant government agencies.

This is a contract position for up to 5 years with the possibility of further extension.
